

Quionne Scott Matchett is a wife, mother, preacher, speaker, exhorter, mentor, and prayer intercessor. She is a member of Restoration Station Christian Fellowship in Edgewater Park, NJ where she is currently enrolled in Minister in Training class. At Restoration Station she serves in leadership as Director of the Prayer Team, Director of Women's Ministry, and Co-Leader of a Life Group.

Quionne is an educated and professional woman. She has a B.A. in Africana Studies from Rutgers University, and is currently pursuing a M.A. in Labor and Employment Relations. She has extensive experience in academic personnel and labor relations. She is skilled in negotiating collective bargaining agreements with unions, ensuring contract compliance, managing grievance procedures, and participating in dispute resolution processes including mediation and arbitration.

Her greatest passion is serving God and His people. As an anointed exhorter and powerful prayer intercessor, she uses her voice to speak deliverance and empower women to be restored, walk in wholeness, and live out their God-given assignment. She has a heart for people and reaches them by being transparent, practical, warm, and compassionate.

Quionne resides in New Jersey with her husband, Durane, and three sons, two of whom who are in college with the youngest starting in the fall of 2019.
